

Working with Unpredictability in Organisations

A One-Day Workshop
Stockholm, 5 September
London, 20 October
2017

Uncertainty is becoming the new norm. How do we act in the face of this reality, manage our anxiety and frustration and find ways to work together with both the planned and unplanned in organisations?

Join us for a one-day workshop to explore what the Complexity Sciences and Systems-Centered® Training offer to help us survive and prosper through the ups and downs of organisational life.

Why, Who and What?

This workshop is for leaders and managers wanting to work more effectively with both the planned and unplanned aspects of organisational life.

Participants will:

- Clarify what's stable and what's changing in their organisations
- Explore what they do that helps and gets in the way of leading and managing in the context of this reality
- Experiment with applying the basics of Complex Responsive Processes and Systems-Centered® Theory and methods to work with the known and unknown

Our goal is to co-create an energising and stimulating experience with concrete next steps to apply when you're back at work

Facilitators, Fee & Sign Up

Facilitators

The trainings will be led by Katarina Billman and Rowena Davis, both experienced organisational consultants. They have many years of practical experience applying Complex Responsive Processes and Systems-Centered practice in their organisations and with their clients.

Fee & Timing

Introductory one-off fee: £325 / SEK 3,600 + VAT. The day is from 09.00 to 17.00

STOCKHOLM Register online now

LONDON Register online now